

Whoa, folks! Slow down! Looks to me like a lot of this diversity-fueling action from the past several years has done little to foster competition. Instead, the rise of the conglomerate ownership of multiple outlets in cities is, I believe, having the opposite effect. Does anyone there remember that the "Public" is supposed to own the airwaves, off which these corporations are making BILLIONS of dollars. And, at the same time, there is LESS news available than ever before on radio AND television. Let's think very carefully, long and hard about unfettering these folks even more. Most of them operate like THEY own the airwaves, not US.

Thanks.
